

When it comes to climate change, are we providing bread or stones?

While some fear the outcome of the Paris Talks was too little, too weak and too late, Joan Brown considers the accord signed by 95 countries a nourishing gift to all the peoples of the earth, much like the breads the delegates bought and munched on their way to climate meetings.

Hear more about bread - and Paris - on March 5th.

Joan's photo of the bread-maker on the main thoroughfare to the climate meetings.

4th Annual Interfaith Climate Conference

Joan Brown, a Franciscan Sister

Executive Director of New Mexico Interfaith Power and Light

Participant in the Paris Climate Talks

Panel: Climate Change Successes, Challenges and Next Steps

Congressman John Garamendi; Joan Brown
Chief Caleen Sisk, Winnemem Wintu Tribe;
Humberto Camacho, Humphrey Fellow, NGO Environmental Consultant from Bolivia

Two afternoon workshop sessions - 5 choices each session

Practical solutions to a lower carbon footprint – Advocacy options to extend our influence
– Reflections on living in a time of climate change

Complete schedule at: <https://www.cooldavis.org/2016/01/28/5677/>

Saturday, March 5th from 9:30 am– 3:30 pm, lunch included

Doors open at 8:45 am for registration & exhibits

St. James Catholic Church in Davis (1275 B St.)

Suggested donations $10-20 includes morning coffee & lunch

Consider sponsoring a student with an additional donation

Free childcare available at Lutheran Church of the Incarnation. Sign up in advance.

Register at <http://march5climateconference.eventbrite.com>

Yolo Interfaith Alliance
for Climate Justice

